Book summary

I was department manager at a global corporation when the acquisition of a competitor was announced. We didn't anticipate the monster that was lurking behind the corner when a year of reorganizations, layoffs and conflicts started. When it was time for Christmas leave the mess had taken it's toll, I was put on sick leave for exhaustion syndrome, or more popularly put, I was burned out. The way back with using photography as therapy, a photo workshop with a big impact on my photography, competition successes - it all comes together in the book In the twilight zone.
